EPIPHANY 3 / AUSTRALIA DAY EVE

REFLECTION

This Sunday is the eve of Australia Day. After many years of controversy about the date the latest polls tell us that the majority of Australians now want to keep the date and get on with being proud to be Australians, facing the issues of colonisation together and acknowledging them while not allowing them to divide us. According to the polls our young people are not interested in being ashamed to be Australians. They want to be looking forward to the good we can do if we work together for healing and for unity as Australians together. Sometimes the Christian church does this, constantly feeling like we need to apologise for the wrongs done by misguided and sometimes cruel Christian leaders over the past 2000 years. Indeed, the abuse exists and requires us to work to bring healing and reconciliation where possible, but it does not define what a Christian is. In fact, it is the opposite to who we are. To truly live for Jesus we have to come to terms with the fact that the church is made up of human beings and is therefore vulnerable to the inclusion of people who own the title but are not true disciples of Jesus in their actions. Church hurt is real, but so is the healing power of the Holy Spirit, the gifts of the Spirit flowing through those who truly follow Jesus, the joy of knowing we are saved and are free from the things of which our hearts were once afraid. Christianity is based in this faith which understands sin for what it is but hopes and believes in the God who is faithful and has given us the way out of slavery to sin and into living for Jesus without fear. Looking back to our history also helps us to know this through study of the scriptures written by people who experienced Jesus and the early church at the time, and also the many secular writings of the time which refer to Jesus, the crucifixion, the resurrection and the rise of the Christian church across the Roman world. We are not without witnesses from within and without the church, so we know we are not believing in vain what Paul has written in 1 Corinthians 1:18 'The message of the Cross is foolishness to those who are perishing but to us who are being saved it is the power of God'.
